Resume Follows:

My name is Scott Rall. I have been a Minnesota resident for 35 years and have been involved in the protection and enhancement of the states resources on many fronts for 25 of those years. I am currently self employed as an independent financial services representative. I have served as a committee member and president of the Southwest Minnesota Fishing Club, Nobles County Pheasants Forever and am a member of countless other wildlife and habitat organizations. I am a outdoor writer for the Worthington Daily Globe and use this space to inform and educate the readership on important resource issues. I feel that I am very well informed on the issues and challenges that currently face our resource managers. My interests lie beyond the office realm as I am an avid hunter and fisherman as well as a passionate amateur dog trainer. I spend many days afield in Minnesota as well as neighboring states. Ten years on the local Chamber of Commerce and other community volunteer roles has resulted in many positive outcomes. You may very easily find a better typist, public speaker or political activist but you will not find a person more committed and determined to do what is necessary to protect and enhance the resources of our great state. Please consider me for a position on the most important committee.
