To whom it may concern:

I would like to submit my application for one of the four governor-appointed positions on the board of the Destination Medical Center Corporation.

Maximizing Mayo's presence and expansion is one of the most critical economic-development issues currently before the state, and I believe it will have significant implication for many, many years to come.

I come to that conclusion as the mayor of the largest city in the state who has promoted Minneapolis' relationship to Rochester and Mayo literally across the globe. I have made presentations promoting the connection between the MSP life-science community and Mayo to businesses groups in Sweden and France, at medical office parks in China and at a biotech conference in Japan. I have learned that people outside of our state understand this better than even we do in Minnesota, and I want to help make that case here at home as well.

I also understand the importance of this project as someone who has been close to Rochester for most of my life. I visited Rochester regularly as a child while my mother was treated at the Clinic for lupus and my brother for cornea irregularity. I married a woman from Rochester and spend many days each year with her family there. I have come to see this very unique city as one of the true gems of our state and critical to the quality of life of all Minnesotans. I believe my personal connections to so many people living in Rochester give me an added insight into the assets and needs to attract talent.

Along with my strong belief in the city and the project, I believe I can bring unique and important assets to the work. As I understand the project, the goals move beyond development of the clinic itself into city-building initiatives that make Rochester even more attractive for patients to visit and medical talent to live. I have spent many years on these issues in my time as Mayor and believe my experience can help the group navigate through questions of urban development, transportation, communications and other important implications.

The State of Minnesota, the City of Rochester and the Mayo Clinic deserve congratulations on this very exciting initiative. Whether or not I am honored to serve on this group, please consider me a resource willing to help make this a success.

Sincerely,

Mayor R.T. Rybak
City of Minneapolis

R.T. Rybak, a Minneapolis native, was elected Mayor of Minneapolis in 2001, in his first run for public office, and was overwhelmingly reelected in 2005 and 2009. Since then, he has gotten strong results for Minneapolis in:

- Growth. Mayor Rybak has led a multi-pronged approach to growing jobs and the economy through, among other strategies, growing the high-tech and green-economy sectors, helping small business succeed, fostering innovation, increasing regional cooperation and training displaced and hard-to-employ workers in fast-growing sectors. He is focused on closing racial disparities in employment and entrepreneurship, and is pursuing the goal of adding 65,000 residents by 2025, primarily along transit corridors.
- Transit and livability. Under Mayor Rybak's leadership, options for transit and non-motorized transportation have expanded greatly: Minneapolis is now served by light rail and bus rapid transit, and has been named the #1 bike city in America as well as one of the greenest cities in America. Mayor Rybak is also putting in place a plan to add a network of modern streetcars. He has also focused on building and promoting the amenities that attract talent. In the last 10 years, Minneapolis has topped multiple national lists of the best cities to live, work, visit and do business.
- Future workforce. Mayor Rybak founded the Minneapolis Promise, which provides young people with free college and career counseling, free and low-cost access to college, and high-quality summer jobs. Since 2004, the STEP-UP summer jobs program has placed 16,000 youth — 86% of whom are youth of color — in real-life jobs with Minneapolis' best private, public and nonprofit employers.
- Fiscal responsibility and reform. Under Mayor Rybak's leadership, the City of Minneapolis has paid down or avoided $241 million in debt, cut spending by 16%, reformed pensions and restored its AAA credit rating. Mayor Rybak instituted results-based management, Minneapolis 311 and Wireless Minneapolis, which made Minneapolis the nation's first fully wireless city.

Mayor Rybak is married to Rochester native Megan O'Hara, a healthy-food advocate and public-relations consultant; they have two adult children, Charlie and Grace. Mayor Rybak is not seeking a fourth term in office and will retire as mayor at the end of 2013.
